

ABSTRACT

An apparatus, system, method and product for automatically transitioning the physical layer interface of a peripheral device to a low power state when a signal is detected by the communication device on a peripheral bus. The technique may include transitioning to different low power states depending upon whether wake up of the device has been enabled by an operating system.

10

20387319.doc